Commentary

Market sentiment remained positive during August. Lower global interest rates helped to support equity valuations. Geopolitical risks were the main negative factor influencing global markets. New provocations by North Korea, shooting a missile over Japan, aggressive wording towards the United States and unfolding a plan to bomb the US Pacific island of Guam, provoked extensive military exercises by the US with its Allies South Korea and Japan. The economic picture for the Asian region remained relatively stable at current levels, indicating further expansion. Sentiment indexes were hurt by the geo-political risks in North Korea. Japan's inflation rate is slowly increasing, rising to 0.5% YoY in Tokyo during August, while the 2Q GDP registered a 4% annualized growth rate. Export data in South Korea, Taiwan and Indonesia continue to show double digit growth. China's industrial production rose 6.4% YoY in July and the PMI rose to 51.1 in July. Asian currencies profited from the global US Dollar weakness. The dissolution of the Business advisory council by President Trump certainly had a negative impact on the Greenback. The weak denunciation by the President of the racist rally in Charlottesville pushed several high level US CEO's to quit the council. The fund rose by 0.80% during the month, outperforming its Benchmark MSCI Far East by 0.22%. The main positive country contribution came from South Korea, China, Taiwan and Japan, while Thailand and Indonesia under performed. Technology led the winning sectors, followed by Consumer Goods, Basic Materials, Oils and Industrials, while defensive sectors like health care and consumer services were a drag on the index. We made no material changes to the portfolio and remain hedged on the Yen and HK$ exposure. Higher volatility results during the month not only from geo-political risks but as well from generally lower trading volume during the summer month. We remain positive on current market valuations in Asia and Japan.
